UNITED STATES

OVERALL ASSESSMENT

The US is currently off track on its ODA commitment as compared with a straight-line trajectory, but DATA estimates it has sufficient increases in the pipeline to fulfill its commitment by 2010. The US has been a clear leader on HIV/AIDS and malaria and has made significant contributions to Africa's peace and security. The latest (2006) DAC spending figures reveal that it did not emphasise primary education or water and sanitation as much as other G8 members. The US ties for last place among the G7 on the quality of development assistance' and, despite pressure from the White House and other quarters for reform, domestic policy reveals little encouragement for a pro-development outcome from the Doha negotiations.
